Greetings from your President

Dear Hampshire Breeders,

The year is sure going fast. It's hard to believe we are almost halfway through 2022. And, it's exciting to see some crops going in and others almost ready to harvest. There's something magical about summer in Kansas. Nonetheless, we are always in need of moisture, especially in my area and further west.

This year has been interesting to say the least. I have had a couple of eye-opening experiences, and I'd like to think I'm better because of them. First, I was diagnosed with a torn bicep and my rotator cuff was 75% damaged (ouch). So with this, my wife and I planned to pull the bucks so lambing would be done around March 1st. I do not recommend going through lambing season with an injured shoulder. My surgery was on March 3rd. Thankfully, everything went about as well as we'd hoped for. My wife, Kris, took my spot as primary caretaker of the sheep (and me) for several months. She attended my doctor's visits to make sure I was telling her everything. She was really strict about following their instructions, especially not letting me drive.

I now know she can drive a truck and trailer or about anything that involves feeding sheep. While she was a trooper through the whole thing, I must say I think she is really relieved about me getting better.

As I recovered, I also took on an entirely different beast: substitute teaching. Some days were challenging; I never knew how much patience I lacked. And even though it was my job to teach them, I learned our true rural kids have a much better attitudes and work ethics. I was surprised by how some students just tried to get by doing so little or nothing at all. They sure liked to blame everyone but themselves. I guess this means we all have work to do in teaching the city folk about our ways of living in rural Kansas.

A few last things:

Congratulations to all the online sale producers and the Ohio cosigners.

To the youth, remember our futurity programs. Please enter and submit your show results.

Please also take in the Hampshires Across America shows.

If you have any questions, contact the AHSA office and they would be happy to assist you.

As always, the board appreciates any input or ideas you have. Please feel free to reach out to your director or me.

Ted Van Horn
AHSA President

Niemeier 818 (Senior Stud)

Over 3 years he has proven to be a true stud for Held's Hampshires!
An impressive phenotype but more importantly his genetic contributions are creating a strong legacy for producing nationally competitive Hampshires!

Pullin 21-54 NNPRR

This buck took a great picture last fall, its more exciting that he sired a terrific set of February and March lambs. See the results at Sedalia in June and during the summer show season!

Thank you to Mumm Hampshires IL for acquiring 1/2 interest.

Held 21-4235 NNPRR (Fall Ram Lamb)

Consigned to the 2022 National Hampshire Sale at the Midwest Stud Ram sale in June!

Sired by Held 19-4042 NNPRR, this massive buck has the bone, wool and structure to make advancement in a breeding program. This pic was taken in early April, check our website for updated pictures on this guy. We really think he could be something special!

Held 21-4266 NNPRR-Fall Ewe

2022 Heart of Champion Sale entry purchased by Hand Hampshires MO in April! This outstanding fall ewe lamb is sired by Held 19-4042 (Niemeier 818 x Held 1646, full sister to the 1st buck we sent to Baa Baa Acres in 2014). Thank you to the Larry Hand family for selecting this great female, expecting a fun show season with 4266!!

Held 21-4242 NNPRR

Thank you to Randy Berens Family SD for purchasing this barn favorite in the AHSA online sale May 4. This triplet reared female was sired by Held 19-4042 NNPRR, a son of Niemeier 818 that clicked so well for our 21' fall and 22' spring crop this year. Lots of wool, bone and structure in these sheep. Does Your Ram Fertility Add Up?

Keep your rams in shape to breed.

By: Clay Elliott, Ph.D., sheep nutritionist with Purina Animal Nutrition

Reproduction is a 1 + 1 equation, and, in sheep breeding, results often equal two or more lambs. In most cases, the attention focuses on the ewe side of the equation. However, you can't ignore the other side of the equation – the ram.

Proper ram management and nutrition before and during the breeding season will guarantee rams are ready to perform. Here are some tips to ensure ram fertility adds up to a successful breeding season:

Nutrition's role in ram fertility

Rams must be in good body condition before breeding season turnout. Breeding is an intensive task with rams covering anywhere from 25 to 100 ewes, depending on the situation. A body condition score of 2.5 to 3 on a scale of 5 points ensures rams have enough condition to maintain energy levels during the breeding season.

If a ram is too thin at the start of the breeding season, he will wear down, become weak and breed fewer ewes. The same goes for obese rams that tend to have reduced libido and won't follow ewes for breeding.

Keeping rams in proper body condition starts at least four months before the breeding season. Maintain rams' nutrition during this period using a balanced supplement. High-fat supplements with low protein are options since they provide rams additional energy to add condition while being highly palatable to optimize feed intake.

Also, it is important to feed rams supplements low in protein because it reduces pizzle rot. When rams ingest protein in excess of 16%, it causes a build-up of urea that leads to an infection in the sheath, known as pizzle rot, that can damage the penis.

Testing ram fertility

An important first step to guarantee your rams will get ewes bred is to have a veterinarian perform a breeding soundness exam on each ram. The following tests will be performed during a breeding soundness exam:

- Physical exam: Evaluate the ram's structure, such as body condition score, hooves, legs, teeth and eyes.
- Scrotal measurement: A scrotal circumference is taken with a measuring tape. At a year-old, rams should have a minimum measurement of 28 cm.
- Semen morphology: An evaluation looking at whether the sperm cells are normal or abnormal. A passing exam requires a minimum of 70% normal sperm. If white blood cells are present in the semen sample, it's a sign of infection and may require the ram to be treated and held from breeding.
- Semen motility: A test analyzing how well the semen moves. Ideally, a ram should score 70% or better for motility, with a minimum score of 30% for a ram to pass.

Conduct a breeding soundness exam every breeding season between two weeks to one month before turning rams out on ewes. If a ram doesn't pass the breeding soundness exam, you can make arrangements to purchase another ram or adjust breeding plans. Consult your veterinarian when it's time to schedule a breeding soundness exam and make it part of your routine management.

Five management considerations

Maximizing ram fertility takes thoughtful management, considering the needs of both rams and ewes. Follow these five guidelines to improve the breeding performance of your flock.

1. Turnout age: Most rams reach puberty by seven months old and are ready to breed.
2. Retirement age: Generally, after six years old, a ram will begin to see limited performance. Body structure, arthritis and hoof health are common ailments in mature rams. Consider culling older rams from the flock to maintain fertility.
3. Number of ewes: A young ram less than a year-old can cover 25 ewes in a pasture and 50 ewes in a pen. Mature rams can cover 50 ewes on pasture and up to 100 ewes in a pen.
4. Commingling rams: In large pastures or range situations, running multiple rams is necessary for proper coverage. For pen breeding, one ram per pen of ewes is the best option to limit fighting and potential injuries. When rams aren't with ewes for breeding, consider penning or pasturing them together so they can establish a pecking order before the breeding season.
5. Length of breeding season: Each breeding cycle lasts approximately 21 days. Leaving rams out for a minimum of 63 days allows them to cover ewes for at least three breeding cycles.

Ram fertility is just as important as ewe fertility when it comes to breeding season. Make sure both sides of the equation add up to more lambs on the ground by focusing on ram nutrition and management.

Contact your local Purina nutritionist to learn more about nutrition for your flock.
